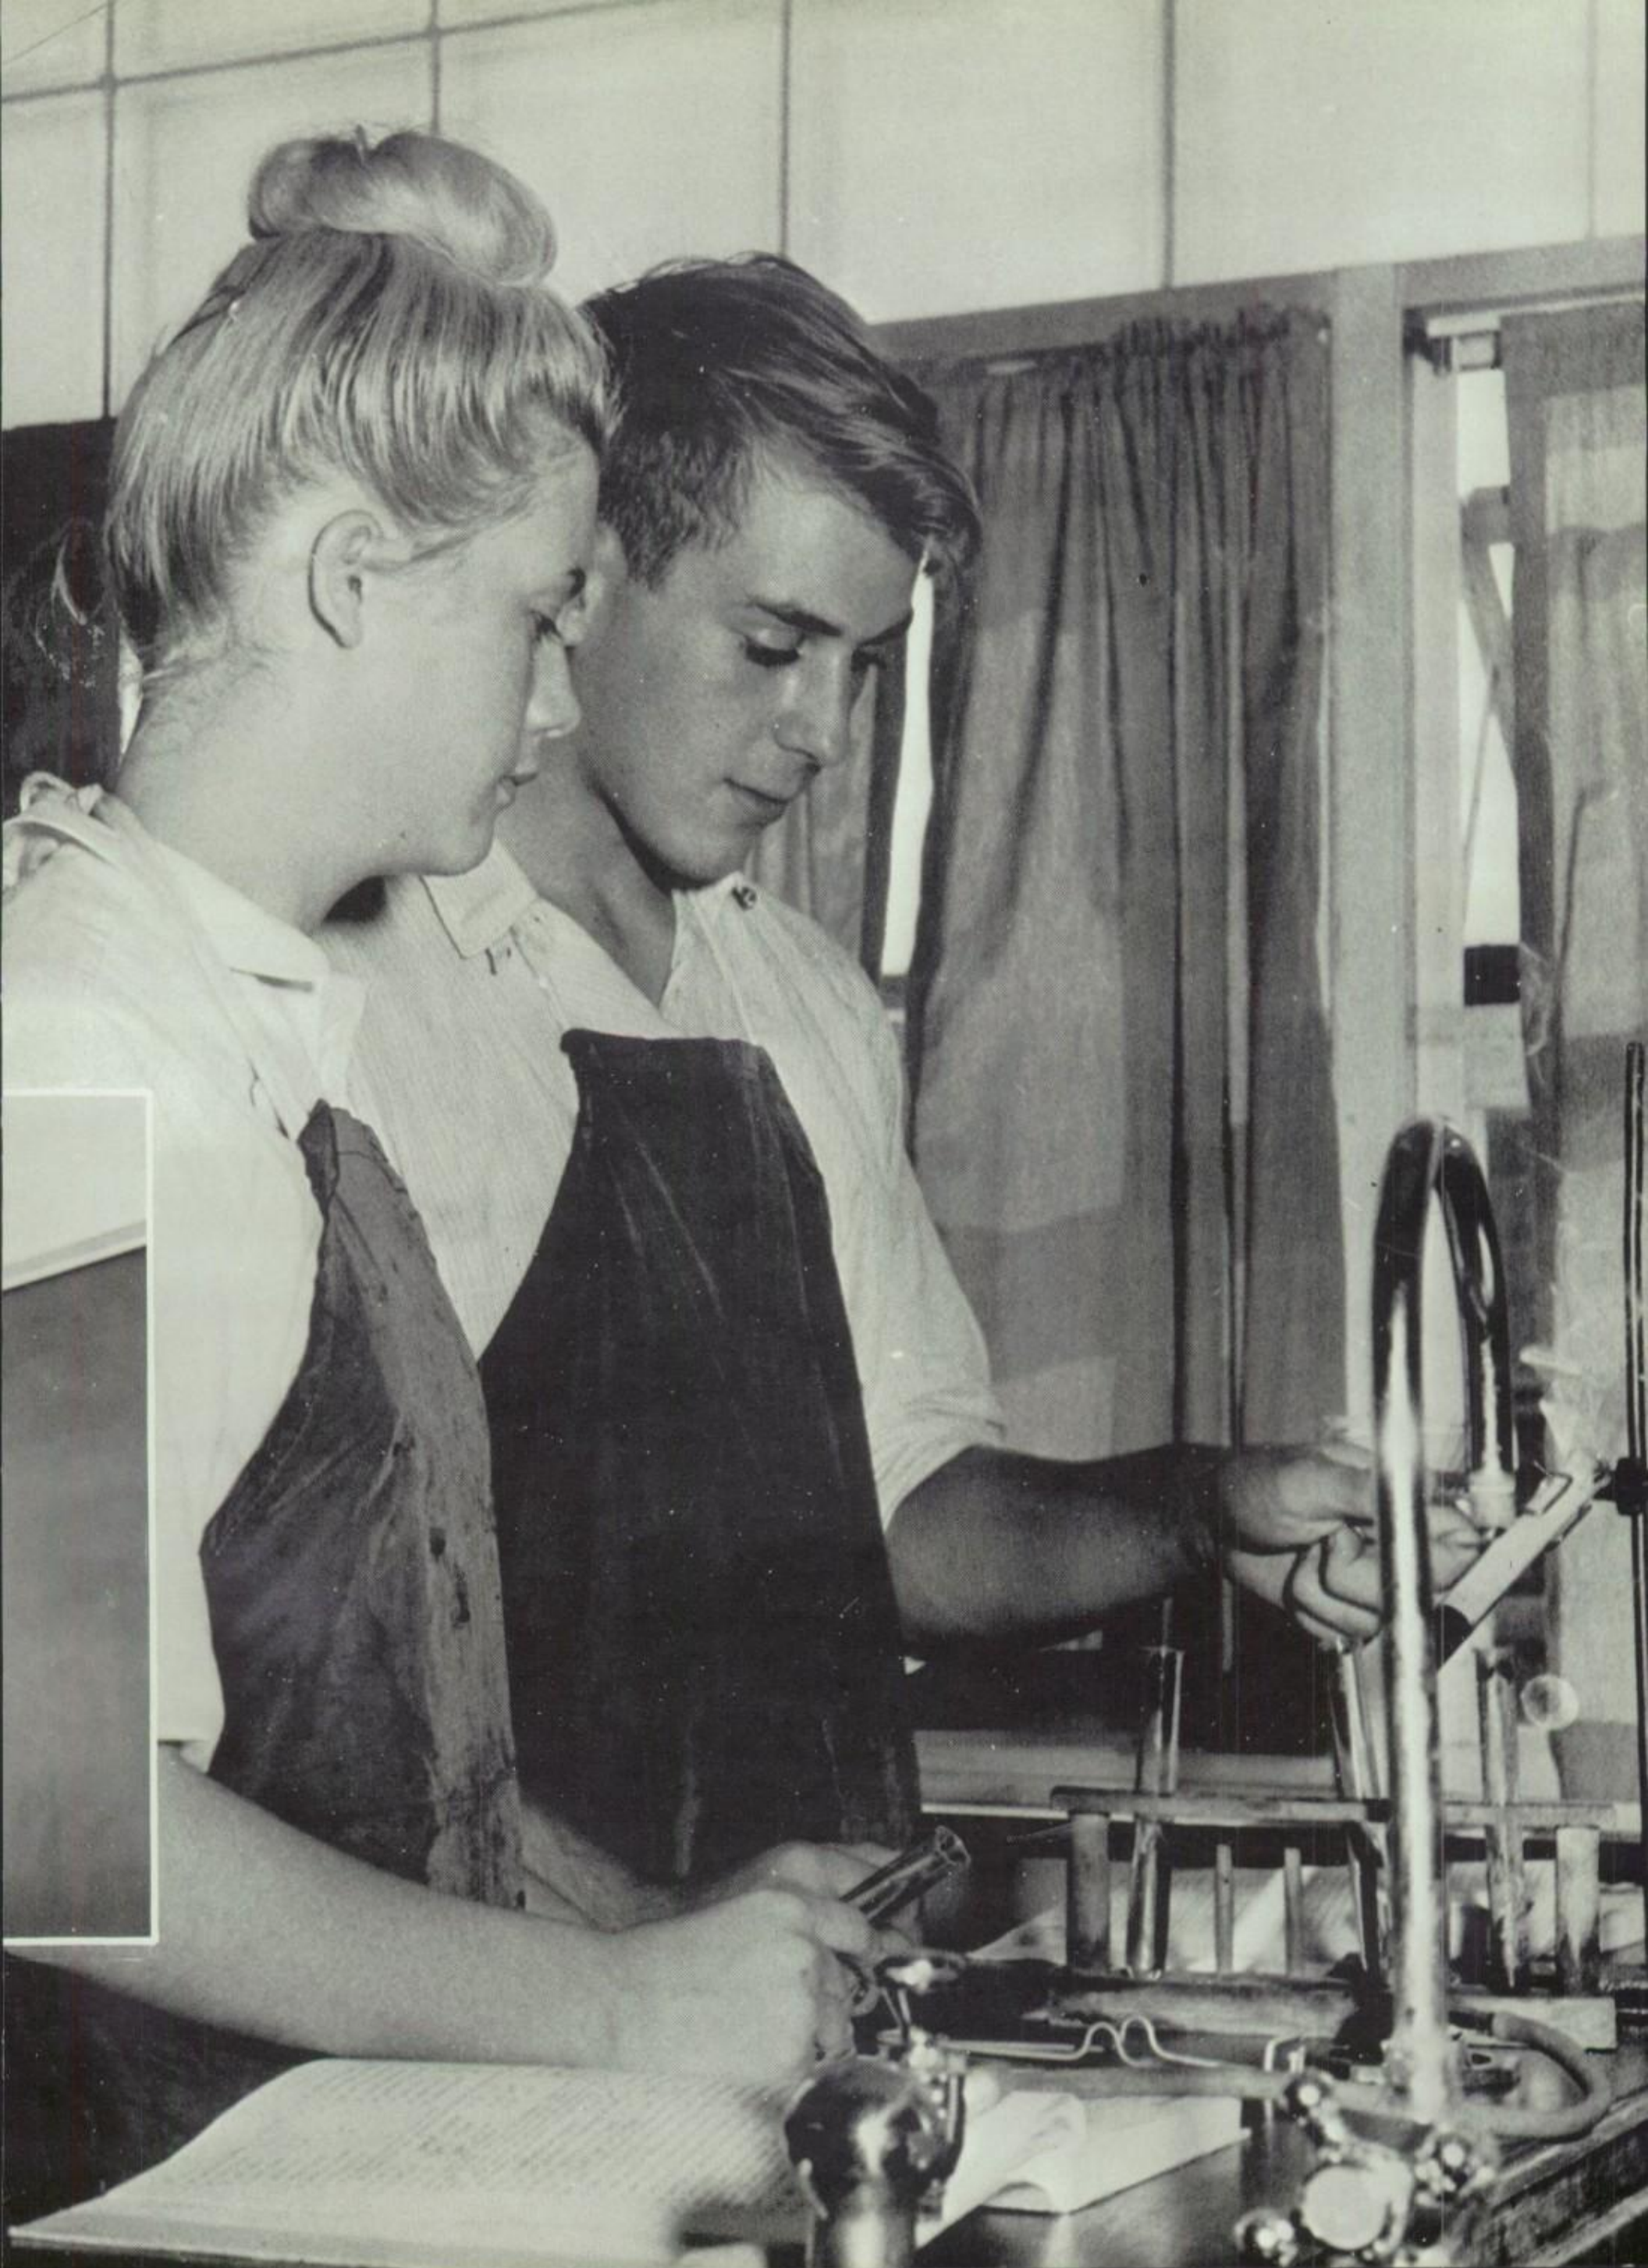
CHARACTER.

PURPOSE

Tennyson once remarked, "Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers." It is the purpose of our school to provide its students with this lingering wisdom. Northeastern believes in such a manner as to insure their optimum mental, spiritual, physical and social growth to enable them to take their rightful places as good citizens of the community.



Charles L. Sutton, Principal

New Building and Evaluation Highlight the Year.

Two very important events took place at Northeastern this year. Using criteria set up by a National study of Secondary School Evaluation, our faculty and staff along with citizens of the community, worked for two years under the competent guidance of our administration to prepare a self-evaluation of our school. In November, the evaluating committee spent three days at Northeastern utilizing the same criteria and also the reports prepared by our school.

Our new junior high building, begun last summer, was finally completed and occupied for the first time by the 7th and 8th graders. The fantastic amount of work involved in both of these matters was borne by our dedicated administrators who labor constantly to better our school.

Northeastern Board of School Directors

Charles W. Richards, Gleason Burdick, L. Wilbur Mayer, Mary Ellen Snell, Stanley Gross — Pres., Russel C. Strine, Mrs. Stanley Gross — Sec., Grover C. Koch, Allen A. Beshore, Not Present: Charles S. Wolf.

Our board of School Directors is elected by the citizens of the school community to serve as a policy making body for the entire district.

The board is responsible for adopting budgets and providing the services of trained executive personnel. There are six standing committees that take care of these responsibilities. The greatest responsibility is the selection of the chief school administrator.

Clarence R. Orendorf, Supervising Principal is empowered by the board as the chief executive officer. His duties are to prepare and recommend budgets, furnish educational leadership, and organize the entire staff.

Charles L. Sutton, Principal, is responsible for the educational and professional leadership of the high school.

William H. Schaeffer, Assistant Principal, has the specific responsibilities for attendance and discipline.

Miss Cassel and Mr. Manseau, guidance counselors, discuss college with Christine Herbst.

Future Dreams Take Form

"Come to me if you need help." This is the familiar tune of our guidance counselors. Most of the students come to talk about their future dreams. So the pamphlets are spread out, and the discussion started.

Miss Cassel and Mr. Manseau, our exemplarary guidance counselors, have been constantly making improvements on an already efficient program. During the 1963-64 school year more slide and film programs have been shown to the students and the P.T.A.

The guidance department has become more important with the growing complexity of our nation's future.

Our library assists many students in their studies.

In an Atmosphere of Silence, We Study

How many overdues do you have? Those nickel-a-day fines may seem cruel, but every cent goes toward enriching our library shelves. This year, several new encyclopedias and many other volumes of reference materials were purchased along with at least fifteen new magazines, including several recreational publications. In coordination with the guidance department, a unique career corner, containing college catalogs and information on any vocation was organized. As a citadel of knowledge, our library serves each student.

Help is given to Diane Laird by Mr. Heilman, librarian, in checking out a book.

Natalie Earhart and John McAfee utilize the Career Corner in the library.

Beverly Reeser hangs a poster for World Cultures' class.

It is the function of our social studies department to make each one of us a responsible citizen, aware of the situations which complicate our world. Junior high students learn the relationship between geography and history with the aid of a new textbook which combines these subjects. To stimulate the feeling of citizenship and loyalty to state and country, freshman Pennsylvania History and United States History studied by juniors, covers such topics as civics and the Constitution in addition to the history related to these courses. Tenth and eleventh grade social studies courses including World Cultures and Economics, help us to see how the knowledge previously acquired fits into the pattern of world history. By the time we reach twelfth grade we are prepared to study the problems of democracy which we will soon be responsible for solving.

In a Pennsylvania History class, George Herrold, Ann Krebs, and Harold Zuber inspect a map of the state.

Language forms the basis for all human communication and therefore constitutes a very important part of our curriculum. The major goal of our language arts program is to assure each student an ever-increasing maturity in his command and understanding of language usage.

Our fine English department trains each student in grammatical constructions and also develops his understanding and love of American and English literature.

New tape recorders, filmstrips, records, and textbooks supplement our growing foreign language program. Students using recorders are able to better develop their pronunciation. Filmstrips introduce the student to the culture and the people of France and Germany.

The Space Age Awaits Us.

We the children of the space age must meet our call! Perhaps the best way of preparing for the conquest of space and for vocations on this automated planet is through the study of mathematics and other sciences. To aid us in doing so, our science department offers a program of continuous study for all levels from the seventh through twelfth grades. Each year, hundreds of dollars worth of equipment is received for demonstrative and experimental purposes. An analytical balance and a radiation demonstrator are two of the main items which were purchased this year for the benefit of physics and chemistry students.

The mathematics and science departments worked in planned co-ordination for the first time this year in the fields of trigonometry and physics. An experimental program of student self-help, which is the forerunner of the teaching machine, was also introduced in Algebra I.

Safety Education Enables Juniors to Learn Driving Skills.

Honk! Honk! "Look out! Here it comes!" The familiar blue streak of this year's 1964 drivers' education car may very well have brought this exclamation. Mr. Altland was the Safety Education instructor for this year's juniors. In order to better prepare students for year-round driving, practice sessions were scheduled not only during periods of dry-road weather, but also while driving conditions were less desirable. Opportunities are also given to Sophomores who are 16 years old and to Seniors who have driving permits to take advantage of this course.

Business Teachers: Mr. Little, Mrs. Criswell, Miss Lease, Mr. Stankus, and Mr. Crider.

Mr. Altland, drivers' education teacher, leaves the car after a successful training period.

Office Experiences Inspire Future Business Personnel.

The business department of Northeastern is the training ground for the secretaries, stenographers, office clerks, and accountants of tomorrow. Ninth grade students begin study for the commercial world with General Business Training, while Typing I and Commercial Math are offered to sophomores. By the time a student is a junior, he should have decided whether or not he wants to enter into the business world. Therefore the more specialized courses of Shorthand I and Bookkeeping I, along with Typing II are offered. Senior business students have the opportunity of learning to use the bookkeeping machine, calculator, adding machine, electric typewriter, and dictaphone in Office Practice. In addition, Business English, Business Law, Shorthand II, and Bookkeeping II are offered to the Senior who wishes additional training.

Mr. Crider adds a bit of humor to his teaching by giving the busy signal to Natalie Ehrhart and Carla Allison on the demonstration telephone.

The Fine Arts Encourage Individual Expression

Long hours were spent in rehearsals by Miss Davis, Mr. Kurzenknabe and Mr. Krone with the cast for the presentation of Northeastern's first musical, "The Guy from Venus." These dedicated people directed the many musical groups in assembly performances and in programs such as the Spring and Winter Concerts.

Imagination is the lifeblood of all art and Mr. Koch and Mr. Raffensperger constantly strive to arouse this in their students. Experiments were performed as part of their activities by more students than ever before as they worked to create unique projects. They also assisted the students in providing settings for school activities.

It is the desire of each of these teachers to aid the student in developing his particular talents.

A new teacher, Mr. Gladfelter, has joined our ranks and is now the wood shop instructor. This year, for the first time, girls were admitted into the mechanical drawing program. They Deserve Our Recognition

Students, teachers and administrators could never conduct a school of Northeastern's size without the help of the personnel who keep things running smoothly.

Working together, for the betterment of the student-body, the secretaries accomplish much during an average day. They are kept quite busy with the ever-changing activities at Northeastern.

Ever present in the school are the industrious custodians who maintain the building and grounds and strive to keep them neat and clean.

Traveling a total of 724 miles daily, 939 Northeastern students rode 19 buses. Our bus drivers brought them from an area of 49.78 square miles to school and transported them to parades and athletic events.

With the newly enlarged cafeteria, almost doubled in capacity, about 650 were fed daily. Additional space and improved organization permitted our cooks to work with greater speed and efficiency.

INITATIVE

The modern academic program adheres to the old adage that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." Northeastern provides the opportunity for everyone to ease the mental strain of academic work. Assemblies, clubs, plays, and dances are only a few of the extra-curricular activities offered. Recognition is given, in the form of various awards, to persons who demonstrate outstanding initiative in scholastic ability, athletic participation, and musical leadership. All students are encouraged to take part in those activities which best suit themselves.

Members of Senior High Distinguished Honor Roll are: Sharon Beshore, Jeanne Millar, Cheryl Snyder, Blake Trimble, Henry Buckwalter. SEATED: Iris Eicher, Judith Koval.

Outstanding Students

Students of Northeastern have achieved recognition in a wide variety of fields. A 3.7 average is necessary to meet the ranks of the Distinguished Honor Roll. To obtain a position on the Honor Roll, a 3.3 average is required.

Certificates and letters are now awarded to outstanding students in the music and academic fields.

A treasured and well deserved honor was won for Northeastern this fall by the Bobcat Soccer Team. A trophy for winning the County Championship was joined by another trophy for success in the District 3 P.I.A.A. Soccer tournament. All team members received metals for their participation on this winning team.

Assemblies Serve Dual Purpose

Serving to both entertain and educate the students of Northeastern, the selection of assemblies ranged from home talent to paid professionals.

Musical assemblies by the school choruses lighted each holiday. Outstanding athletes were honored at award assemblies following each sports season. In late winter, the Senior Band presented a winter concert for the student body.

Profession assemblies included the "Rodgers and Hammerstein Singers," Madam Silvercruy, sculptorer, and a Liquid Air demonstration. Concerts by visiting groups were presented by York Junior College Glee Club, Penn State Blue Band and Eastern High School Chorus.

Selections from "Sound of Music" and "South Pacific" were sung by the "Rodgers and Hammerstein Singers."

The Ninth and Tenth Grade Chorus adds to the enjoyment of the Christmas Assembly.

Sculptor Suzanna Silvercruy fascinated the student body with a display of her talent.

Treading the Boards

Northeastern's faculty presented "You Can't Take It With You," written by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman, on April 19 and 20. The story is based on a rather excentric family which does not believe in conventionalism. The proceeds from the production was used for scholarships for graduating seniors.

One of the most successful and difficult of Senior Class Plays was "Our Town," produced by the class of 1964 on October 18 and 19. Written by Thornton Wilder, this play is most unusual because no scenery is used and the stage manager explains the events of almost any town in the acts of Life, Love and Death.

For the first time in the history of Northeastern, a musical was presented by the combined Music Deparment. "The Guy From Venus," featured a young man from the planet Venus, who explores earth and ends up solving the problems of an earth girl. The singing, dancing, and acting abilities exhibited by the musical cast were a pleasant surprise for the audience.

Third Yearbook Queen Crowned

On November 1, 1963, at the magic hour or ten o'clock, Connie Rosinski was crowned Northeastern's Yearbook Queen at the third annual Yearbook Dance sponsored by the Yearbook Staff.

This year's candidates and their managers competed keenly with one another and the combined efforts resulted in the selling of 670 yearbooks.

Jim Yinger, Connie's sales manager, won the title for her by selling the most yearbooks. The crowning was performed by Meredith Miller, last year's queen.

The pleasant surprise of receiving the title of Yearbook Queen shows on the face of Connie Rosinski.

Passing Fancies

Each age group in every era has peculiarities which sets it apart. These passing fancies are especially evident in the teenage years. The 1963-1964 Northeastern teenager was no exception. The fads they created and supported are theirs alone.

Normal dress was altered slightly as pull-on sweaters regained popularity. Mohair sweaters became a fad of boys as well as girls. Wrap around skirts and smocks completed the up to date look. Hair-do's were casual and head-bands were the thing.

Q. "What's gray and white on the inside and red and white on the outside?"

A. "A can of Campbell's Cream of Elephant soup," is an example of the favorite elephant jokes, which grew in numbers and evolved into the even more riotous grape jokes.

Suddenly, from among the ranks of recording artists, The Beatles from England burst upon the scene. Their popularity swept literally the entire world and Beatle sweat shirts, magazines and wigs appeared everywhere.

With these we will remember 1964.

Dances provide students with an opportunity to break the routine of school life and to improve their personalities by socializing with others.

Friday evening record hops served as money making projects for clubs. Again, this year Student Council sponsored dances after Friday evening home basketball games.

"Holiday By Candlelight," the theme for the Christmas dance was effectively carried through in the decorations of the cafeteria and the music played by our high school Dance Band.

Red Lion Country Club provided a lovely setting for the Junior-Senior Prom. "In the Still of the Night," served as Prom title and theme song for Dave Baker's Band. Through the efforts of the Juniors, the spring dance will long be remembered.

An old-fashioned sleigh, loaded with a Christmas tree, holly and presents was the feature decoration at Christmas dance.

ENTHUSIASM

Beneath the surface of our athletic achievements there lies one factor which can be recognized as having made the Northeastern Bobocats victors: enthusiasm. The heart of a school lies in its spirit and this year that zeal reached its peak. Beginning with the soccer season, the entire student body was charged with a fervent electricity never before seen. This enthusiasm, caused by our teams' unprecedented total of victories, spread throughout the community. As a result, that most important relationship between school and community was impressively aroused.

Unlimited enthusiasm and a desire to exceed victories of previous years led the mighty Bobcats through district playoffs this season. Unscored upon in league action, our determined team knocked over all opposition and, for the fifth consecutive year, won the York County championship.

Under the skillful guidance of Coach William Schaffer, they ploughed through the District 3 semi-finals, defeating Penn Manor with a score of 2-0, and booted out the Lebanon County Champions, 1-0, at Elizabethtown. The District 3 crown was finally ours when Northeastern bagged two goals against Greencastle-Antrim.

In a gallant bid to earn the Eastern Regional laurels, the cunning orange and black contended the West Chester Warriors only to be scored upon, for the first time this season, through a penalty kick.

Varsity Basketball rounded out its' season with victory as well as defeat.

Throughout the year their big rivals were Central and Spring Grove, the latter being their final breaking point.

Although losing the Western Division play-off game with Spring Grove, the Bobcats ended with an impressive 21-4 record.

During the season, an increased number of fans attending the games, greatly helped the morale of the Bobcats.

While losing the artistry of this years' seniors, for next season, the team will remain in contention under the steady hand of Coach Phil Kessler to lead his boys to victory.

1963 proved to be a rebuilding period as the Jr. High Varsity squad gained valuable experience and skill. The Jr. Bobcats lost most of their starting players the previous year but Coach Stammel's hustlers came through with a total of three wins and twelve losses.

The Northeastern Jr. High, although not doing as well as they wished, gained something even more valuable — sportsmanship and cooperation.

Volleyball, one of the two interscholastic sports in which Northeastern girls may participate, is a popular springtime activity for girls from grades nine through twelve. Miss Bricker is coach of both the varsity and the junior varsity teams. Twice a week, the girls play in competitions, each consisting of three games, with other schools. Through these games, the girls acquire a high degree of skill and sportsmanship. They also learn the great importance of teamwork which will be of value to them throughout their lives.

Trip Enlightens Players Outlook

With the clicking and banging of sticks, Northeastern's girls energetically tackled their season of field hockey. Unfortunately, this year's team was not a very successful one, but the girls all profited by the resulting fun and thrill of playing league field hockey.

Near the beginning of the season, the team and its coach, Miss Rosalyn Greenlee, attended the International Field Hockey Tournament held at Goucher College. The first of its kind to ever have been held in the United States, this tournament was participated in by professional women's field hockey teams from all over the world.

Practice, and perseverance led the boys' volleyball team straight through the county league to state finals. Linksmen Gain in League Ranks.

Being relatively new at Northeastern, golf is rapidly becoming one of our leading spring sports. Returning from past years, our linksmen, through the help of Coach Jay Keller, strived to improve their game. Although they failed to cinch the York County title, the Bobcats did conclude the season in a respectable third place. With even more members remaining, we can look forward to and anticipate a championship team in the future.

Determined Bobcats Look to the Future

In the "63" baseball season the Bobcats, coached by Mr. Phil Kessler, glided to a second place halt as they were outdone by Central for the Western division title.

Winning eight games and losing only two this season the swatters hope to regain the Western division trophy and go on to capture the York County baseball title in "64." Losing seniors Terry Heilman and Nev Weirich, could prove to be an impediment next year, but the Bobcats are determined.

CHARACTER

An important factor leading to maturity is the development of character. With the opportunities provided by Northeastern's organizations, students are able to stimulate this growth. The high standards set by each group advisor guide the members in self-discipline and ethics.

At the same time, specific knowledge gained through the activities of the various clubs will lead to a wider scope of interests for the individuals. When a student is able to give himself for the betterment of others, responsibility and pride are resolved.

Student Council

Through Student Council, the voice of the student body, problems concerning the students are brought to light and remedied in the best possible way. Weekly, this active organization meets under the supervision of Mr. Smeltzer.

One of the main problems of this school year was the over-crowded halls which they improved by having student monitors at the two main intersections in the Junior and Senior High wings.

After Friday night home basketball games, the council sponsored dances.

During one week in February a Bundle Days Program was held; students were asked to bring old clothes for shipment to needy children in the back-woods of Tennessee and Kentucky.

Effort Gains Recognition

Honor Society

Scholarship, leadership, character, and service are the qualities needed to be accepted into the Scott W. Knaub Chapter of the National Honor Society.

To be inducted into this organization is a great privilege and is enjoyed by only a few Juniors and Seniors with the required characteristics.

Each year two scholarships are awarded to two Senior students. In order to finance this project, a dance and several pretzel sales were held.

Another important event was the College-tea. This is a very valuable service for college-bound upperclassmen. Students then have the opportunity to become acquainted with various colleges by talking with Northeastern alumni who are presently attending college.

Yearbook Staff

Constantly striving to please the student body, Northeastern's yearbook staff under the supervision of Mr. Raffensperger worked diligently to produce this year's edition of Les Memoires. The Sophomores, Juniors, and Seniors of which the staff is comprised, spent at least three nights each week working on layouts, picture taking, copy, captions, and headlines. Sandy Aughenbaugh, Editor-in-Chief, deserves recognition for her competent guidance in leading the staff through its hectic schedule of deadlines.

Hi-Y Club

The Hi-Y Club has been organized as the Christian Club for young men. During the year they perform various odd jobs for others in the community. For recreation they attend several hockey games at the Hershey Sports Arena, home of the American Hockey League's Hershey Bears. At the end of each school year a banquet is held to honor the senior members of the club. Under the supervision of Mr. Markel, the members of this club have been greatly benefited by their numerous activities and experiences.

Varsity Club

Although the interest of the Varsity Club members as individuals, is athletics, as a group these boys are interested in more than sports.

Shortly before the beginning of the high school basketball season, the club traveled to the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia to view three college basketball games.

In service to Northeastern, the Varsity Club takes charge of buying and distributing soda for dances to all groups within the school and of selling refreshments at all home basketball games. Their willingness to help, benefits the entire student body.

Giving an insight into the profession of education is the primary goal of the Future Teachers of America's Chapter at Northeastern. Handbook

Several times during the summer months, the Handbook committee met at school to draw up Northeastern's third Handbook. This group was composed of representatives from Student Council and Honor Society. Their labors produced a booklet containing school regulations, curriculum, sport schedules, clubs, awards and operational procedures. The handbook has become a source of valuable information for students, faculty and administration.

Reading and Discussion

Music, Religion, Philosophy and Literature were studied by the members of the Discussion Club during club periods. These engrossed students learned to express themselves and at the same time acquired an understanding of other persons' views. Under the guidance of Mr. Raver, the Discussion Club has helped its members grow intellectually.

Sr. Red Cross

Participation is the object of the Red Cross Club in programs which will benefit and help others. The representatives have done just that. Two main projects this year were in affiliation with Pleasant Acres. Club members presented a program at the home on April 1, 1964. They also promoted the making of Birthday Boxes for the Pleasant Acres residents. Through this club's effort the public image of Northeastern has been heightened.

Drama Club

One of the largest clubs at Northeastern is the Drama Club. With the guidance of Mrs. Miller and Mr. King, members of the club learned the process of production, staging and make-up. Members of the Stage Crew explained stage directions and lighting to the members. The club produced several short plays under the direction of student members for the entire school. Club members served as ushers for a York Little Theatre production and gained valuable experience from several field trips to playhouses in the area. It isn't likely that many of these amateurs will become professional actors, but the practice in self-expression that they receive will be valuable throughout their lives.

Stage Crew

Managing the lighting of the stage and auditorium is just one of the essential functions of the Stage Crew. All scenery and sets required for school organization-sponsored productions are designed and constructed by this group. This year, among other things, they miraculously transformed our stage into a department store for the February musical. Comprised of students who have a hope of seeing a school newspaper printed, the Newspaper Club has worked hard in order to turn its dream into reality. The talents of the club members vary as they must find, report, edit and publish the news.

Through a school paper the club feels the students will be given a further awareness of the activities of the Northeastern students.

Photography Club

Through this club boys learn and practice photography and dark room procedures. Their labors resulted in outstanding photographs for the yearbook.

Due to the increased need for better pictures, the Photography Club bought a new 4x5 camera. To finance the purchase, the club held a Beatnick dance and took pictures of couples at school record hops.

Rewarded Efforts

Hard work and long hours of practice made this year's Junior Band of Northeastern the best it has been. The seventh and eighth grade students, who make up the band were rewarded for their efforts with cheers and applause they received during the parades and concerts in which they participated.

For the second consecutive year, the Junior Band had its own majorettes and flag-twirlers leading the way.

In addition to the many school choruses, there is a special chorus comprised of a few select students. These students, after taking a series of tests, then combine with others from various schools, to make up the District Chorus of 1964. Each year the group is led by a guest conductor of the finest ability. He guides the chorus into an experience which only the participant can fully appreciate. This year the members will be housed in the surrounding community of Manheim Central School District. Miss Davis, our music director, prepares the students for the rigid auditions.

Expression Through Music Enriches School Year

This year's ninth and tenth grade chorus provided assemblies and the Spring Concert with its inspirational music. If you passed the Band room eighth period Thursdays and Fridays you saw students working toward perfection under the leadership of their instructor, Miss Davis.

Auditions were held in the beginning of the year to determine the different voice parts. After the preliminaries were finished the group got down to hard work which showed in their fine singing. Contrary to last year's ninth and tenth grade chorus worked toward four and sometimes six-part harmony with great success.

Entertainment for School and Community.

Much was gained by the many hours of practice spent in Senior Chorus rehearsal. Not only have the members grown in their musical ability, but have also provided our school and community with entertainment for a wide variety of occasions.

Alumni Day was the first appearance of the eleventh and twelfth graders. Soon came Thanksgiving and Christmas assemblies to which the Chorus added its talents.

Spring was the busiest season with two Easter assemblies, a Chorus exchange program with Eastern High School, Spring Concert, Baccalaureate, and Commencement.

Concentration Required of Young Singers

A new experience awaited the seventh grade students who were interested in the field of music. Even though many of the students were presented with the problem of their changing voices, a fine quality of flexibility was exhibited by this chorus. The pupils soon learned that concentration is a must when learning intonation. Presenting their results in assemblies, and other requested performances, the chorus displayed their commendable art of ringing young voices.

Danny Adams and Robin Eicher, baritones in the seventh and eighth grade chorus, blend their tones in the harmony of the group.

CLIMAX

Climaxing each student's public education is his senior year. Throughout high school, each one of us is showered with blithe experiences which never seem very important at the time. These adventures, however, suddenly become extremely significant when one becomes a senior. Realizing that now "Our Town," the Christmas Dance, the Prom, the trip to New York World's Fair — all these things — are over and can never again be relived is a tremendously difficult thing to do. Although we must yearningly say "goodbye" to Northeastern now, we will always remember.

Northeastern's Life-line

Students — from neophyte seventh graders receiving their first taste of high school life, to seniors teetering on the threshold of newly-discovered adulthood — form the life-line of Northeastern. In a sense, Northeastern is a community in which students are the citizens and the faculty serves as a guiding council. School life, as community life, has many phases. Each is important to the growth and well-being of the student and all are balanced in a well-planned program to insure maximum benefit to the student.

Hidden Talent Displayed by the Juniors

Take Her, She's Mine, the Jr. Class Play, was presented March 20 and April 4 under the direction of Mrs. Miller. Written by Phoebe and Henry Ephron, this comedy involves a west coast family with two daughters. Molly, the eldest daughter, begins college in an all girl school in the East and continues through the many stages of growing to maturity through education. Only her father, Mr. Michaelson, seems to suffer through each of her stages more than Molly herself. Mrs. Michaelson is always there to comfort and help her confused husband. But after two years of so-called guiding Molly through college, Frank Michaelson turns around only to find his youngest daughter, Liz, ready to enter college.

Mrs. Miller did an excellent job as director with the help of Linda Neiman and Candy Etter as student directors. The folk singers added lively spirit to the fast moving comedy. Many students were involved backstage with costumes, lighting, props, scenery, sound effects, set dressing and make-up. Sue Wolf portrayed Molly Michaelson, while Luther Diehl took the part of Frank Michaelson. The other two main characters were Christine Herbst as Mrs. Michaelson and Lynda Lauer as Liz Michaelson.

Students Exhibit Talent and Initiative

Assemblies such as the Central Band added a festive air to spring school days. During one assembly, Greg King was awarded the basketball he used in the play-offs with Spring Grove to make the 1000th point of his high school career. Our Honor Society held the first County Honor Society Day, a very successful venture. Members from the county's schools learned the Society's purpose and its activities in other schools. In April the French department under Miss Runion's direction produced a French Variety Show. Miss Davis' choruses produced the Spring Concert with a variation of songs. The Student Council sponsored an All-School Function during which a movie was shown, games were played and a dance was held. Student Council elections in May were planned to resemble our national campaigns and elections. Senior assembly entitled "This is the Class That Was" was enthusiastically accepted and served as a great salute to the class of '64.

Seniors Explore Future on Trip.

Excited and anticipant, the class of 1964 departed May 13, for the wonderful New York World's Fair. The anxious group entered Long Island's Flushing Meadow Park, the site of the Fair. During that unforgettable day the eager class roamed the fairground absorbing its splendor and atmosphere. All expectations were overwhelmingly surpassed by the interesting exhibits, fabulous pavilions, many foreign faces, and exotic foods.

After what will be remembered as one of the most memorable days of their lives, they wearily arrived home May 14, carrying a pocket full of memories.

The foreign exhibits attracted many students.

Tender Is the Night

The calm of the night accented by the lust of the moon was the setting for the most important dance of the school year. The Junior-Senior Prom was presented by the Junior Class of Northeastern High School on May 22, 1964. The Out Door Country Club was the ideal location for a splendid display of the Juniors, Seniors, and guests at their very best.

"Tender Is the Night," the theme of the Prom was made a reality with candlelight glowing on the golden decorations of the dance floor and the peaceful moon illuminating the couples on the terrace. The music was furnished by Bill Collins and his band. This night remains, never to be forgotten.

Several couples engage in conversation between dances.

Final preparations are made by the seniors for graduation during a trial performance the morning of commencement.

Joy and sorrow conflict within the seniors as they receive their diplomas from Mr. Orendorf.

Graduation Opens New Doors

To the dulcet strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" the class of 1964 solemnly marched to their place on the stage. While the chorus sang and the speakers gave their addresses, precious recollections of the past six years spent at Northeastern floated through each black-capped and orange-tasselled head. Then Mr. Sutton presented the class and those wandering minds snapped back to reality as each graduate received that true symbol of commencement — his diploma. At the sound of the first notes of the Alma Mater the tassels were turned, as if to signify the change which took place at that moment, and for the last time the class of 1964 yearningly sang its school song. Desperately hugging their diplomas and fiercely fighting tears they passed back up the aisle.

As they welcomed their parents and friends after the ceremonies, tears could be seen in their eyes because this was a moment of change for all of them. When they realize the duties that remain before them, they assure us that they have the initiative to cope with their personal problems as well as those of others.

Perhaps the challenge of the future seems enormous, but the world looks up to them — the leaders of tomorrow.

Life begins and ends as the seniors proceed to the stage in step to "Pomp and Circumstance."
